Here is the update from our Public Health Director:

"We should be able to work something up with DEC (they are the ones who monitor air quality, while we address the health effects). Also, we've got the smoke health effects information up at the top of the Epi website.

http://www.epi.hss.state.ak.us/eh/wildfire/default.htm

Julie--can we also make that a link for the Current Health Topics on the Public Health home page? Thanks. "

Water-Mining Initiative Fails Legal Test

June 22, 2007, Anchorage, Alaska – Lieutenant Governor Sean Parnell denied certification yesterday of an application for an initiative related to water and mining. The initiative would have set out water quality-related prohibitions for any new metallic mining operations over 640 acres in size.

According to Lieutenant Governor Parnell, "The initiative would impermissibly allocate public lands and waters away from mining uses. The people, via Alaska's constitution and statutes, reserved these powers of appropriation to the legislature."

Lieutenant Governor Parnell's decision was supported by an Alaska Department of Law legal opinion, dated June 21, 2007, which concluded that "the initiative goes beyond regulation and is an impermissible allocation of public assets." The Department of Law relied on Alaska Supreme Court case precedent to conclude that the initiative improperly prevents concurrent use of resources by allocating both public land and water away from mining activity. The lieutenant governor's decision may be appealed within 30 days.

The Department of Law's memo is available online at http://www.ltgov.state.ak.us/PDFs/07WATRopinion.PDF.

The lieutenant governor's letter to the initiative's sponsors is available at

Well. As well as the BP call. Exxon, as per expected, wasn't encouraging - but TRex does say he'll meet me in person.

Unless I sit down w/Mulva (he should be in AK in July), I'm not sure we'll be getting an app from them, despite his promise they would during session. I so encouraged him - told him ideally they would be partnering with us on the gasline. He was most concerned about CP's rep in AK. I said it's good. Quite good.

His staff called my land line, got Tony on the line - fine conversation.

Let's make sure the other calls are as logistically smooth as possible. I hate to keep people waiting when I know their schedule is packed too.

So now my understanding is the next call has been cancelled and I'll wait to hear back when I'm supposed to try again. Sooner the better in knowing when Mulva is next available.
